

BJS brought 200 children from farmer suicide affected families of Marathwada to WERC, Pune for educational rehabilitation.

In the month of November, Bharatiya Jain Sanghatana (BJS) conducted survey in 434 farmer suicide affected families of Beed, Latur and Osmanabad districts of marathwada region and brought 120 children to WERC, Pune. And today, 80 students have been brought, after conducting survey in 350 families in remaining five districts of Marathwada namely, Aurangabad, Jalna, parbhani, Hingoli and Naded. In this manner, the two phases of survey have been conducted and children have been brought successfully to Pune for their educational rehabilitation. BJS have taken up the complete responsibility of these students from entire parts of Marathwada for giving them free education.

These children have started the new life with the new school in Pune. Along with quality education, BJS is giving every opportunity for their growth such as nutritious food, regular health checkups, games, sports, arts and all other extracurricular activities and computer training. BJS have formed a Mental Health Department for WERC students under the leadership and guidance of the well known psychologist Dr. Kinjal Goyal. This is going to be the great help for monitoring the mental health of each every student of WERC.

In this way, BJS is trying to handle this project of education rehabilitation of farmer suicide affected students, giving importance to each and every aspect. These students from all remaining districts of Marathwada have come BJS WERC today, 2nd of December after the meeting and farewell at their respective districts on the previous day. These children have started their daily school routine at WERC.
